13.1 LEARNING OUTCOMES

At the end of this unit, you will be able to:

- describe the media wrings of the government of India;

- identify the functions of government media organisations; and
- acknowledge the significance of these wings in disseminating government and policy information.

13.2 PIB (PRESS INFORMATION BUREAU)

Patra Suchna Karyalya or Press Information Bureau is known as PIB in short. Its main job is to organize activities and functions related to government and make them reach newspapers. It also organizes press conferences from time to time. Its head office is located in shastri bhavan in Delhi. It has 4 main regional offices in Mumbai, Kolkata, Chennai and New Delhi and has 34 branch offices. PIB is running 10 information offices in our country which are situated in New Delhi, Srinagar, Jalandhar, Port Blair, and Imphal. PIB also prints a weekly titled as 'humara desh', which is published in 10 languages.

PIB is a central organization which is a connecting link between government and press and works as a mode of communication. Its function is to interconnect government and the media that serves to provide the feedback to the government on different reactions of the public as reflected in the media. The modes of dissemination of information via PIB are done through press releases, press notes, features, articles, backgrounders and photographs. PIB has been implementing scheme of journalist welfare fund. The revised scheme came into effect in its broadest based form from 25th august, 2010. Assistance of up to an amount of five lakh can be sanctioned to the journalist under the scheme. In situations of death the relief can be provided to the family of the journalist.

The website of PIB is www.Pib.gov.in which is an important source of information that was redesigned in 2010 to make it friendly with advanced feature. Regional offices of the bureau have separate websites in seven different languages viz Tamil, Malayalam, Kannada, Telugu, Bengali, Marathi and Mizo.

13.3 ALL INDIA RADIO

All India Radio holds the whole responsibility of broadcasting in India. It is the unit of ministry of information and broadcasting. Indian broadcasting company started the work of broadcasting with the establishment of two centers in Bombay and Calcutta, in 1927. It was a private company. After implementation of this company in 1930, Indian government took the work of broadcasting under its own authority and renamed it as Indian state broadcasting. But it was closed on 9 October 1931. It was again started in May 1932. A new office of control of broadcasting was opened apart from already existing offices in Calcutta and Bombay, and a new center was opened in Delhi. On 8 June, 1936 its name was changed from Indian state broadcasting to All India Radio.

Since then the proliferation of broadcasting is taking place regularly in country. Before independence some native Indian states had their own broadcasting centers. Post independence after the fusion of states Indian government took these centers under their control. After the acquisition of Mysore Akashvani in 1950, All India Radio changed its name to AKASHWANI.

In 1947, the AIR had a network of 6 stations and now Akashvani has 197 centers. Akashvani is the top most comprehensive medium of communication.

Many programs are broadcast by Aakashvani. Some of the Main programs are as follows- :

Music, drama, news, timely topic, foreign broadcast services, vividh bharti and advertisement broadcast service, programs for particular listeners, yuvavani, sports and school broadcast, audience research, science program and program magazines.

13.4 DOORDARSHAN

Doordarshan started as a center in Delhi, as another part of aakashvani on 15 September 1959. By the year 1975, seven centers were started in Delhi, Bombay, and madras, Kolkata, Srinagar, Amritsar and Lucknow respectively. Apart from these centers there were two relay centers in Mussoorie and Pune which used to relay programs of Delhi and Bombay.

Since 15 Aug, 1982 doordarshan started to present national programs along with colored programs. These programs are created at different centers of doordarshan, they are mainly based on national unity, communal harmony, family welfare, art and dance with cultural heritage, world literature and the Indian contribution, Indian freedom struggle, science and news and topical context.

Regular telecast of national and international news and topical contexts takes place. English and Hindi bulletins of 20 minutes each are telecasted. Apart from directorate of Doordarshan there is a satellite directorate of doordarshan, under which seven different centers of Jaipur, Raipur, Gulmarg, Sambalpur, Hyderabad and Muzaffarpur are working. In the decade of 1981- 1999 the number of transmitters rose from 19 to 519.

DD-National: One of the largest terrestrial networks in the world. It covers more than 92% of the population and 82% of the land area of the country.

DD News: DD news is the only bilingual news channel in the country. The channel was launched on November 3, 2003.

DD sports: The channel was launched on 18th march 1999.

DD Bharati: It was launched on 26th January 2002. The channel has been telecasting programmes on art, literature and culture. An eight hours loop has been introduced which is being telecast thrice a day.

DD Urdu: It is the state owned television channel broadcasted from Doordarshan in Delhi. The channel was launched in 2006. The channel is available in India and in parts of Asia and the Gulf countries. It was established on 15 August 2006 following a governmental commitment in the Parliament made in response to the unstarred question no. 2026 regarding launch of Urdu Channel.

DD India: The channel was launched on 14th march, 1995. It was earlier called as DD World but was renamed as DD India in 2002.

13.5 PUBLICATION DIVISION

It is a repository of books and journals for highlighting matters of national importance and India's rich and diverse cultural heritage. Every year it publishes more than 200 books. Apart from printing policies of government it publishes Aajkal, Bal Bharti, Kurukshetra, Yojana, Indian and foreign review, Bhagirathi etc. It holds the exclusive mandate for preserving national heritage and disseminating information through the production and sale of low priced, quality reading material on subjects of national importance. The subjects range from art, history, culture, biographies of eminent persons, land and people, flora and fauna, children's literature, science and technology and Gandhian Literature to work of reference like India – A Reference Annual. The Division also brings out selected speeches of the Presidents and Prime Ministers of India. With headquarters at Delhi, the Division functions through its various field units – Sales Emporia at New Delhi, Mumbai, Chennai, Kolkata, Patna, Lucknow, Hyderabad, Thiruvananthapuram and Yojana Offices at New Delhi, Mumbai, Kolkata, Chennai, Ahmedabad, Guwahati, Hyderabad and Bangalore. The offices of Employment News and Journals Unit are located in New Delhi.

The Division, which has descended in some ways from the department set up by the British Government to conduct propaganda against the Axis Powers during World War-II, brought out periodicals in not only English, Hindi and Urdu, but also in some foreign languages, e.g. Persian, Arabic and Russian. In 1943, it was shifted under ministry of information and broadcast and was named as publication division in the year 1944. It has 3 branches- : a. editing branch, b. production branch, c. sales branch.

Apart from books, the division publishes 21 periodicals in English, hindi and regional languages. Some of the publications are:

1. Bal Bharti: The popular children monthly Bal Bharti in Hindi is being published regularly since 1948.
2. Aaj Kal: The prestigious literary magazine Aaj kal in Hindi and Urdu covers different aspects of Indian culture and literature. The magazine has entered into its 68th year of publication.
3. Yojana: The flagship publication seeks to carry the message of planned development to all sections of society and serve as a forum to promote a healthy discussion.
4. Kurukshetra: It is a leading magazine on the rural development issues. It enjoys one of the highest circulation in its category of magazines.

5. Employment news: It was launched in 1976 with the objective to provide information on the recruitment vacancies of the Govt. under both Centre and State.

13.6 RNI (REGISTRAR OF NEWSPAPERS OF INDIA)

The government body was setup on 1st July, 1956. It was established as per the recommendations of the First Press Commission Report in 1953. It further involved the amendment of the Press and Registration of Books Act 1867 and included the guidelines and functions of RNI. RNI has been responsible for carrying out both statutory and non-statutory functions.

Under Statutory Functions, the following jobs are covered:

- a) It compiles and maintains a “Register of Newspapers” which has all the important details about the newspapers.
- b) It also issues a certificate of registration for a valid declaration.
- c) It annually reviews the financial statements sent by the publishers of newspapers as per Section 19-D of the Press and Registration of Books Act.
- d) Informing the District Magistrates about availability of titles, to intending publishers for filing declaration;
- e) It ensures that newspapers are published as per the guidelines and rules of Press and Registration of Books Act 1867.
- f) It also verifies the circulation claims made by the publishers in their annual statements.
- g) It submits to the Government on or before 31st December each year a report containing all available information and statistics about the press in India.

The following items fall under the non-statutory functions:

- a) Formulation of Newsprint Allocation Policy:

RNI is responsible for developing the guidelines and issuing eligibility certificate to the newspapers for importing newsprint. It further helps in the import of any machinery etc., required for the printing process.

b) Title Verification

As per the provisions of PRB Act of 1867, RNI is also responsible for the verification of the titles of the newspapers. It is done to ensure that no two newspapers share the same titles of same language of different publication houses. In case of foreign titles, a valid license of agreement is to be presented if the titles hold a similarity. The Magistrate has the sole authority of informing the publication houses to revise the titles upon verifying from the Registrar of the Press.

c) Annual statements

Under Section 19(D) under PRB Act (1867), all the publishers are to submit an annual statement under the Registration of Newspapers (Central) Rules, 1956. The penalty for not submitting the financial details is in the form of fine of Rs 500/- under Section 19(K) of the PRB Act. In case if the publisher submits incorrect information or false information then as per Section 14 of the PRB act (1867), a fine of Rs.2000/- will be imposed along with imprisonment for a term that can extend upto 6 months.

In annual statement the publisher includes the following details:

1. Number of published copies per day (Average).
2. The average number of copies distributed (sales, complementary etc).

The publisher who publishes over 2000 copies has to countersign against description chartered accountant or qualified article tester. Small newspapers with subscription of less than 2000 copies, have been exempted from this rule. Educational institutions and religious committees have also been exempted from this rule of RNI, who use these newspapers for their internal communication rather than for sale.

According to the rules press registrar has the right to check any description submitted by any publisher.

13.5.1 Newsprint

The current policy guidelines are as follows:

- a) Not less than one-third of the annual production of indigenous newsprint will be reserved for small and medium newspapers.
- b) Import of newsprint is allowed to actual users.

13.5.2 Import of Newsprint

Any registered newspaper is eligible to import newsprint from outside. The publication house is required to have an eligibility certificate issued by RNI.

Import of Printing Machinery/Material

The procedures and guidelines for import of items are given in the Handbook of Rules and Procedures for Import and Export, issued by the Ministry of Commerce. The Press Registrar helps as an advisor to the ministry in terms of importing technology and resources from international markets. The publication house also has to pay the required custom duties to import foreign technology in the domestic market.

The distributor/proprietor of a paper ought to submit yearly returns by 30th April for the period finishing 31st March, showing the amount of imported newsprint obtained and utilized amid the pertinent periods according to the Ministry of Commerce's notification number 29, dated, 28.01.2004. The profits ought to be properly checked by a chartered accountant. Inability to present the profits in time or accommodation of false data will preclude the paper for validation of Certificate of Registration for import of newsprint.

13.7 DAVP (DIRECTORATE OF ADVERTISING AND VISUAL PUBLICITY)

DAVP came into existence at the time of the outbreak of WW-II. The government of India appointed a Chief Press Advisor. Besides other things, advertising was also the responsibility of the Chief Press Advisor. A post of Advertising Consultant was created in June 1941 under the Chief Press Advisor. This is where DAVP has its roots. On March 1, 1942, the Advertising Consultant Office became the Advertising Branch of the Department of Information & Broadcasting. Following the expansion in its scope, functions and activities, this Advertising unit was declared an Attached Office of the Ministry of Information & Broadcasting on October 1, 1955. The office also assumed the name of Directorate of Advertising & Visual Publicity (DAVP). DAVP was further declared as Head of a Department on April 4, 1959. By virtue of this declaration, financial and administrative powers were delegated to DAVP.

The Directorate of Advertising & Visual Publicity (DAVP) is the nodal agency to undertake multi-media advertising and publicity for various Ministries and Departments of Government of India. Some of the Autonomous Bodies also route their advertisements through DAVP. As a service agency, it endeavors to communicate at grass roots level on behalf of various Central Government Ministries.

The channels of communication used are:

1. Press Advertisements
2. Public Exhibitions
3. Outdoor Promotion (Posters, Banners, Wall Paintings, etc).
4. Booklets and Pamphlets
5. Publicity through audio-visual medium.
6. Distribution of material for publicity
7. Publicity through digital media

DAVP ensures that advertisements designed are focused in sensitizing the public about the prevalent social concerns within the society.

It is an advertising agency for the Central Government. It ensures that the public is informed about the necessary information through printed materials and promotions. It also helps in promoting grass-root policies by devising strategies for advertisement and promotion. DAVP has a network of 32 field exhibition units spread all over the country. They act as an interconnection between the government and the public on issues related to health and education, AIDs awareness, gender equality and many more.

13.8 FIELD PUBLICITY

Field Publicity was setup in 1953. It initially had 32 field publicity units managed by four regional offices. It was designed under the programme of “Five Year Plan Publicity Organization”. The Ministry had a direct control over the concerned offices. Later, the “Directorate of Field Publicity” was appointed to supervise and handle the operations of the regional offices and the publicity units.

The Directorate of Field Publicity is engaged in publicizing important programmes and policies of the government through 207 Field Publicity Units which is in control and supervision of 22 Regional Offices.

It carries out routine and special awareness campaigns on various programmes and policies of Ministries and Departments of the Union Government. It is responsible for disseminating information, generating awareness and altering the attitudes of the people towards the government’s plans and policies. The directorate of field publicity function as three tier namely:

1. Main Headquarters (Situating in Delhi)
2. Regional offices
3. Field publicity Units
